- Job title: IHE junior interoperability solution architect
- Function
  - Attract, manage and contribute to European projects in the e-health sphere
  - Act as the liaison for IHE Europe
  - Build out a knowledge center for the IHE world
    - Become knowledgeable in the IHE interoperability terminology and methodology
    - Assist in developing an open, central repository of information to disseminate IHE information
      - Creation of e-learnings
      - Present new developments to the IHE Europe community
  - Become a neutral solution architect for e-health projects at all levels
  - Support European and national stakeholders in the decision making around e-health interoperability
  - This function is a learning ground where eventually the following skills will be acquired
- Profile
  - Bachelor or Master in Informatics, Engineering, Health IT or equivalent through experience
  - Preferably 2-3 years experience in field that closely relates to the subject matter
  - You have a strong affinity for ICT and e-health
    - Relevant experience in the field of e-health is seen as a positive.
    - in-depth knowledge of the prevalent standards used in e-health
      - standards e-health
        - HL7
        - DICOM
        - SNOMED
        - LOINC
    - Strong overall general interest in IT
      - Basic knowledge of the principles of IT Security
  - You are fluent in English, both spoken and written, knowledge of other languages is a benefit
  - You know how to initiate and conduct functional requirement analysis for projects ranging from intra-hospital to cross-national scope
  - You have an analytical mind with the ability to deduce clear use cases from complex functional requirements
  - You are able to work in teams of international constitution that vary with the task at hand.
  - You are not intimidated by the prospect of handling multiple projects running at the same time, with varying levels of priority.
  - You are willing to deep-dive into the world of health IT standards and are convinced that open use of standards mediated by IHE profiles in healthcare is the surest way to interoperable healthcare success.
  - You are willing to learn on a daily basis, both on a technical level as on an inter-personal level, how to drive the adoption of the IHE methodology can be optimised continually.
    - You are expected take and pass the IHE certified professional program (https://www.ihe.net/education/ihe-certified-professional-program/)(exam costs will be covered)
- What we offer
  - Flexible working hours in a cross-national team
  - You will predominately tele-work autonomously interspersed with a number of European multi-day business trips annually
  - You report to the director of Interoperability of the IHE Europe organization
  - Market-level pay grade